BRISTOL SUBURBAN LEAGUE

Cubans, 11; Fergusonville, 4

The Cubans maintained their pace
in the Bristol Suburban League stopping the winning streak of the Fergu-sonville team last night by the score of 11-4.

The winners used "Jim" Spencer on the hill to turn back the Fergies.
Spencer gave the losers but six hits.
"Tim" McCoy and Gerhardt divided the pitching for the losers and both were good but errors were plentiful behind them.

The White Elephants continued their drive towards the top by handing the West Bristol A. C. their ninth consecutive reverse. Score was 5-2.

"Reds" Devine hurried for the Elephants while "Johnny" Corrigan was on the hill for West Bristol.

"Tommy" Donahue led the swatters
with three hits to his credit.

Larry Mulligan was in fine shape on the Newportville field as the Furman's

COMPULSORY LABOR PLAN TO CUT UNEMPLOYMENT

Hitler Takes Steps Toward Solution of Germany's Problem

SCOPE OF TASK WIDE

As a step toward solution of Germany's unemployment problem,
Adolph Hitler decreed a compulsory labor service, which will officially start on October 1. By January, 1934, it is estimated that a first contingent of 350,000 young Germans will be improving roads and forests, draining swamps and helping farmers.

This is the first of a series of two articles by Colonel Constantine Hieri, secretary of state in the Federal ministry of labor in Germany, outlining the organization of the compulsory labor service.—International News Service.

Chief)

1933, by I. N. S.)

BERLIN, June 7.—The idea of the compulsory labor service is perhaps the most specific expression of the present historic epoch which was born during the world war. Labor service means more than mere "productive jobless relief."

Labor service must not be confined to the jobless masses only but is to become honorary service of the whole German youth for people and fatherland.

That's why the labor service will

OUR CAR HAS BEEN STOLEN

By the Stroller

"Our car has been stolen," reported a certain well-known councilman to the police department, the other evening.

"What is the license number?"
inquired the police.

Given the number the police and even the chairman of the police committee started out on a search of the streets of Bristol in an effort to locate the auto.

The chairman of the police committee found the car at Wood and Washington streets.
He so reported to the police
chief.

Then the police questioned residents in the vicinity of where the machine had been found and were told that the councilman's wife was seen to leave the car there, during the morning.

The councilman was at once informed that the car had been located and that the police knew who had stolen the machine.

"What do you think should be done with the thief?" asked the police committee chairman.

"I think they should be made an example of," replied the councilman.

Then he was politely informed that his wife had driven to a store in the vicinity, made her purchases and forgetting the car, had walked to her home, leaving the car parked where she had first left it.

DR. LE COMPTE NAMED MEDICAL INSPECTOR

RE-ELECT DOUGHERTY

The regular meeting of the Bristol
School Board was held in the directors' room, in the Wood street school building, last evening, all the directors being present. The Board requested the Courier to make the following statement regarding the election of a medical inspector.

The matter of adequate medical inspection of the children in the schools,
has given the Board the deepest concern for several years, and with the desire to increase the efficiency of such inspection, and to elevate the position above a perfunctory status, the Board asked Dr. William C. LeCompte, who has been a member of the Board for a number of years, and who has been at the head of the Health and Sanitation Committee, if he would consider the proposition of taking upon himself the duties of medical inspector. It meant a sacrifice on his part, as he would be compelled to resign his position as school director.

However, after giving the matter consideration, the Doctor decided to accept the proposition of the board. In his new position, Dr. LeCompte will be closely associated with the board and will combine his former duties as chairman of the Health and Sanitation Committee, with those of medical inspector. Following his election as medical inspector, Dr. LeCompte tendered his resignation as a member of the school board, which was accepted.

The question of the selection of a health instructor for next year, which has been held in abeyance for several months, was definitely settled last evening by the re-election of the present incumbent, Mr. Dougherty.

The proper officers of the Board were authorized to negotiate a loan of $10,000 with the Farmers National Bank to pay the teachers' salaries for the month of May.

Lester D. Thorne Dwells On Many Phases of Banking
Problems

SPEECH AT CO. SEAT

Reasons for American Bankers' Ass'n. Opposition to Federal Guaranty Plan

The concluding portion of the speech regarding Federal guaranty of bank deposits, delivered by Lester D.
Thorne, cashier of The Bristol Trust Company, before Bucks County Council of Republican Women at Doyle-town, Friday, is here given:

The local bank still has a surplus of money to lend? So far the bank has been very conservative. It has loaned money to the large banks in Philadelphia, New York or Chicago on call; it has purchased United States Government bonds. The bonds can be sold at a moment's notice so the bank thinks it can take some risk in order to secure a higher rate of return.

Back at the President's desk you will find the bond salesman from Wall Street who has called to persuade the little local bank to buy some bonds of a South American Government. He may even offer some German Municipal Bonds which pay as high as eight per cent. These all look good to the local bank and the bond salesman assures them there is no risk as the countries and cities are absolutely good and the only reason they have to pay high rates of interest when they borrow is because the American people are not familiar with foreign bonds. The bank can make eight per cent and it only pays three to its customers.

When the local bank buys the bond of a South American Government it is lending credit to that Government.
What will they do with the credit?
Anything they like, and the lender has no control over the use it makes of the borrowed money. When the bank buys the German bonds it is

ONE WAR ENDED

The League of Nations has brought two warring nations to a recognition of their league obligations by ceasing hostilities and submitting to the league for settlement the cause of the clash.

In impressive ceremonies at Geneva, Colombia and Peru formally agreed to end their fighting on the Amazon for the possession of Leticia. The terms of the report adopted by the league council last year were accepted. The disputed territory will be turned over to a league commission to administer pending settlement of the dispute through the commission. The latter is authorized to use international forces in maintaining order during the interim. The league having no military force at its disposal, it was indicated that Colombian troops would be "internationalized" temporarily for service in the disputed area.

The settlement has particular interest for the United States by reason of the fact that it is the first time the league has intervened successfully in a dispute in that section of the world covered by the Monroe doctrine. A citizen of the United States will be on the commission to settle the quarrel.

The success of the league in ending the Amazon war doesn't take on the importance, of course, that would attach to it if the warring nations had been world powers. It, nevertheless, is one star in the crown of the league and comes at a time when the latter's prestige and influence had suffered serious decline. The possibility of its proving an influential example to other nations to adopt peaceful means of settling their disputes gives the league achievement additional importance.

ON THE ROAD

Depression blues seem not to have taken all the wanderlust and spirit of exploration out of the make-up of the great motoring public. The auto touring season did not even get a late start this spring, although some had predicted that it would fall in 1933 to but a shadow of its former robust and roland self.

Not until about Independence Day will the tide of motor touring reach its flood, but a vanguard of no mean proportions has been on the road for weeks, judging from the number of "foreign" license plates passing any given point on the transcontinental routes in the course of a day.

Perhaps these early nomads are abroad looking for greener pastures, or are industrial refugees working their way homeward, or unfortunately forced by circumstances over which they have no control to forego their usual ocean voyage this year and be content with seeing a sector of America. But to the initiated they look like the original edition of the auto tourist.

There is some evidence that the depression has affected this summer pastime to the extent that shorter week-end journeys have largely taken the place of the vacation trips into which it was customary to pack the maximum number of miles and points of interest. The week-end motor trip has never enjoyed a greater popularity.

None who can afford them should be chided for indulging in these excursions. They will produce business estimated at $2,500,000.00 and employment for thousands.

leaving, and going elsewhere to live after she got a job. "Don't we get along all right? Haven't I got plenty of room? Now, you let well enough be."

Before she had been there a week Joan knew Maisie's life history from the time she married her first husband at sixteen, to the time she buried her third, a year ago last June. Walter Dunne, it seems, had been in partnership with the late Mr. Kimmer. They had made money together—Maisie didn't say just how. It was the one thing she didn't talk by the hour about. "Oh, Kimmer had his faults," she said. "He was a great hand to have his little drink. I've always been prohibition myself. My folks were very strict. Oh, well—Walt's mighty fine, too, in his way—say what you like."

"He was wonderful to me!" A dozen times Joan tried to tell the story of just how wonderful Walter Dunne had been, but Maisie wasn't a listener. She preferred to do all the talking herself, and eventually Joan gave up. If Maisie didn't want an explanation, why give it?

The hardest part was to get away from the loquacious Maisie long enough to write to Bill at night. It was only then, writing to Bill, that Maisie was a stranger, and her house was alien and new. Sometimes, sitting across the table from her in the evenings, in the bright, warm comfort of the garish apartment, listening to the click, click, click of her tongue, Joan wondered if she had ever lived anywhere else.

The big old house across the bay with its yellow turrets, its wide, wind-swept lawns, and the high hedge in which she had hidden from Aunt Evvie when she was a little girl, were all part of a dim, unreal past. Aunt Evvie, Aunt Babe, and the hatchet faced Heeley were grim, gray figures out of a dream. A dream of long, lonely days that ended in one great flash of light, and love, and poignant agonizing pain.

It was always there—the pain of her parting from Bill. Sometimes it was just a dull ache, that throbbled and rose and fell like the pain of an aching tooth. And then it would flare into sudden, twisting agony, tearing her heart, making her hold out her empty arms in the dark and cry, "Bill—oh, my very dear—come back—come back to me!"

She wrote her very heart out to him. All the foolish endearments that she had been too shy to write before. All the funny little happenings of the days selling lingerie in McBride's bargain basement. All her pride in the job that she had got herself, without a bit of help from anyone. Letter after letter, addressed in her round schoolgirl hand to "Mr. William Martin, c/o Mrs. Alma Martin, Sausalito, Cal. Please forward."

He was always there, in back of her thoughts. His image was always back of her eyes, a wistful boyish figure, groping for her across the miles.

Selling sleazy finery, spreading orchid pajamas enticingly on her counter, smiling at customers, making out charge tags, calling shrilly, "Sign, please, Mr. Buchanan!" her heart was still with him.

"Yes, they wash beautifully, Madam." (Where are you oh Bill, why don't you write—why don't you?)

"No, we haven't had any complaints, Madam. Yes, I'm sure you'll like them. (Maybe there's a letter—there must be—tonight—I'll find one waiting—tonight—)

Then the minutes till closing time would drag, and drag, and refuse to move on at all. Every late customer was an enemy—threatening to keep her from her letter. At last the closing bell, grabbing her hat, pushing through the evening crowds, when her latchkey clicked in the door, Maisie, getting dinner in the kitchen would begin to talk—

"That you, dear? I'm a little late,

HOLLYWOOD, In an unexpected move, Universal has failed to exercise the option of Boris Karloff, whose feat of make up in "Frankenstein," "The Mummy" and other horror films have pointed to him as the logical successor to the late Lon Chaney.

The release of Karloff makes Universal lose three major players within a few weeks. Tala, Birell and Lew Ayres were the other two.

Since the salaries of all these players would have taken a jump with their next option, the move has obvious advantages in economy. Aside from that, studio officials claim that the Laemmle Company now can concentrate on stories, casting them with the best available talent, instead of buying material to fit a group of expensive stars.

Universal now finds itself with only a slim list of contract players. Margaret Sullivan, June Knight, Paul Lukas, Andy Devine, Onslow Stevens, Tom Brown, Vince Barnett, Gloria Stuart, Slim Sumner, Zasu Pitts and Ken Maynard about name them.

First result of Karloff's loss will be a search for an actor to take the title role in H. G. Wells' "The Invisible Man."

It is Abe Lyman who tells the story of the yes-man who told a certain Hollywood producer that he was a genius.

The producer gestured impatiently. "I'm better than that," he said, "I'm ingenious."

HOLLYWOOD PARADE:

The Leslie Howard contract with Warners turns out to be for nine pictures instead of three. And if he stays out the whole term, he will receive a sizeable fortune for the last film.

Matinee-idol Francis Lederer has hearts fluttering here as well as on Broadway. The young actor who'll work for R-K-O, has taken a house

MOVIE TID-BITS.

Young Bob Abbot, who took a movie test the other day, has decided to go back and work in the family textile mills in Boston. The test was very good, too.

According to present plans, Walter Winchell will be in Hollywood for several months, maybe until September. He'll do his column from here. . . . It will be Sammy Lee and not Albertina Rasch who supervises the dancing in the new Joan Crawford picture. And the picture, incidentally, has been changed back to "The Dancing Lady." Bob Montgomery will be in it and maybe Clark Gable. . . .

M-G-M's entire Eskimo family attended every feature that shows at a small Culver City theater. Some of them, they see the film two or three times. . . . And here's an odd one. Ed Perkins, writing from Nice, says that he recently visited the harem of the former Sultan of Turkey. Finding he was from Hollywood, the attendant blurted out: "Is it true that Joan Crawford is divorcing Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.?"

GOOD-BYE PLATINUM BEAUTY; BRONZE HAIR AND SKIN THE LATEST

By Alice Langelier (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent) PARIS—(INS)—Coiffures as well as cosmetics will make bronze statues out of chic women this summer, according to the latest news from French fashion-makers. Bronze hair has succeeded the long-popular platinum shades and complexions are bound to follow suit. Not only are skins to be nicely browned but eyebrows, eyelashes and eyelids must match.

For with the French women imitating their Anglo-Saxon cousins and going in more and more for all kinds of sports, they were certain to brown and naturally they decided to do a good job of it.

Their usually dull, olive skins take on color with just a little help from Old Sol and to acquire a smooth even effect there is a new liquid bronze which gives a most natural appearance.

A touch of bronze eye-shadow is added to the eyelids and eyebrows and the eyelashes are tinted with bronze. Only in the evening is powder used, a green one to give the true bronzy look.

Endeavoring to be beautiful has always been an arduous task for many women, but the "lovelies" of today are up to their necks in this work because of the new modern lighting effects in various restaurants and night-cabarets, not to speak of private homes. It is becoming almost imperative for the girl to know the place where she will dine before making her cosmetic harmony or the result is likely to prove disastrous.

And now further complications have been added at one of the gay resorts of Nice where candles are being used. Women may be more glamorous and alluring in this mellow light, but all depends upon being prepared for it.

The loose curling bob is back in hairdressing styles for summer for women of all ages. It is artistic and usually becoming, though a trifle aging to what is called the "youngish" woman and particularly lovely in the bronze-gold shades and warmer reddish tones now appearing for summer.

HIBERNIANS DEFEAT ODD FELLOWS, 10 TO 5

LOWER BUCKS COUNTY LEAGUE

Last Night's Results

A. O. H. 10; ODD FELLOWS, 5
HULMEVILLE, 9; LANGHORNE, 2
BRISTOL A. A., 11; PARKLAND, 6

Seven runs in the fourth inning enabled the Hibernians to defeat the Odd Fellows last night on Sullivan's field and move into first place in the Lower Bucks County League. Final score stood: Hibernians, 10; Odd Fellows, 5.

Wildness on the part of the Oddies' hurler, Ashby, aided the Hibs in the scoring of seven runs. Ashby walked the first four batters to face him this frame and then Hibs made an error to score two runs which was followed by a double from the bat of Hines and a single by Dougherty. An infield out helped score another tally.

"Danny" Hines was on the hill for the Hibs and was hit hard but was backed by wonderful support in the pinches. The losers made ten hits, and five of these were for extra bases. "Dutch" Afflerbach led the assault against Hines with two doubles and a triple. Still and Hibs also had triples which scored the losers' five runs in the first two innings.

The Hibernians play away Thursday night and meet the Langhorne Giants Friday night.

Bristol A. A. finally vacated the cellar last night when they beat the Parkland A. A., 11-4, on the Parkland field.

Bristol was only credited with six hits but these came at timely moments to push across runs in almost every inning.

"Milt" Jones toed the slab for the Mulholland men and received poor support, as did his opponent, "Spike" Tryon.

Hulmeville A. A. took the measure of the Langhorne Giants at Hulmeville, defeating the colored team, 9-2. The defeat put the Langhorne team in second place.

Shows Results of The Reckless Use of Credit

where, must give up ten dollars of credit for each dollar of money withdrawn. Next the local bank decides to sell some of the South American or German bonds which it owns. The South American Government is in financial trouble and the bonds are only worth twenty or thirty cents for each dollar. German bonds have also collapsed. How about the United States Government bonds? With hundreds, thousands of other banks doing the same thing the price of these have also dropped until the bank has a tremendous loss on these. The bank keeps on until it has used up all its liquid assets and has nothing left to pay the depositors and one day the fatal piece of white paper is pasted on the front door.

It is easily forgotten that the depositor who stands outside to read the Bank Examiner's verdict was the original lender.

"Yet on this jealously guarded base of money itself, banks are free to inflate and multiply credit, each in its own discretion, notwithstanding the fact that the inflation of money and the inflation of credit are similar evils, producing similar miseries. Inflation of credit—ecstasy, delusion, fantastic enrichment. Deflation of credit—depression, crisis, remorse. One state succeeds the other and there is no escape, for one is the cause and the other effect."

Now you can all understand, I am sure, how impossible it will be for the Federal Government to guarantee or insure bank deposits.

During the period from 1908 to 1917, the following states enacted guaranty laws which in every case have proved disastrous because they have tended to demoralize sound banking and accentuated rather than prevented losses to depositors.

Oklahoma, 1908; Kansas, Texas and Nebraska, 1909; Mississippi, 1914; South Dakota, 1915; North Dakota and Washington, 1917.

In each of these states the cost to the banks and to the taxpayers of the state was tremendous and hundreds of millions of dollars were poured into the fund without success.

In addition to these states, over a hundred years ago, the state of New York made an initial experiment of this plan. In 1829, a bank guaranty law was enacted. The fund became bankrupt in 1837 and was repealed in 1842.

The general argument employed to promote the guaranty plan began with the premises that property can be insured and bank deposits are property. It travelled to the broad assumptions that the principle of the distribution of risks through insurance could be applied to bank deposits, that this should be done for the depositors at the expense of the banks and that it should be carried out through assessed contributions to a common fund by the banks pro rata with their deposits. This fund was to be administered by the state and from it deficiencies in the assets of failed institutions to meet depositors' claims should be covered.

It was assumed that sufficient amounts would accrue to this fund from assessments on banks in the prosperous times of large deposits and few failures to meet the emergency of increased bank failures to be expected in periods of depression. In no case was it provided in the plans that the state itself guaranteed deposits, directly or indirectly, by contributing public moneys to the fund or assuming any obligations which the fund should prove unable to meet.

It was argued that salutary influences would react to the benefit of all banks comprised in the plan, since the public confidence which it would inspire would reduce panics and bank runs and prevent money stringency through hoarding. Likewise, the plane of banking conduct was expected to be raised on the theory that the collective liability borne by all the banks for the acts of each would make conservative bankers vigilant to curb irresponsible bankers whose activities might add to their common risks. The bankers, however, were given no punitive powers to enforce such discipline.

Guaranty of deposits having proved a failure under state, it would equally prove a failure under national auspices.

In the Glass Bill, which has recently been passed by both the Senate and the House, the newly added provision is called a "Deposit Insurance Plan." It does not differ in fundamental principles from the "Guaranty of Deposits" plans that have been given fair trials by the eight other states mentioned before.

Perhaps you are not familiar with the provisions of this part of the bill. It provides for the guaranty of 100% of any deposit in any bank not exceeding $10,000; 75% of excess above $10,000, but not exceeding $50,000 and 50% of excess above $50,000. Can you imagine the ultimate cost to the banks and to the taxpayers of the country of any such plan to guarantee or insure the money or credit?

The American Bankers Association, in a resolution adopted, is opposed to the plan for the following reasons:

1. It is a function outside the State or National Government.
2. It is unsound in principle.
3. It is impractical and misleading.
4. It is revolutionary in character.
5. It is subversive to sound economics.
6. It will lower the standard of our present banking system.
7. It is productive of and encourages bad banking.
8. It is a delusion that a tax upon the strong will prevent failures of the weak.

9. It discredits honesty, ability and conservatism.

10. A loss suffered by one bank jeopardizes all banks.

Compulsory Labor Plan To Cut Unemployment

embrace all physically fit German young men of certain age without any exception.

Germany needs her youth for reconstruction.

The labor service was designed to cultivate the German soil in order to improve the conditions of life of a "nation without space."

The scope for this task is wider than anybody dares dream yet. Who knows, for instance, that by cultivating our soil it would be possible to raise the value of our production of foodstuff by 2,000,000,000 marks annually?

The reason for our farmers' complaining of insufficient sales is not an overproduction of farm products—millions of Germans are undernourished—but rather the fact that millions of jobless are not earning money to buy with.

If all the possibilities for cultivation of German soil would be utilized, between 800,000 and 900,000 young men would find work for the next ten years, while the industry is unable to give them jobs.

In addition, the labor service is preparing
